1. If in existence less than 5 years, complete the statement for each year in existence and provide projections of your likely revenues and expenses based on a reasonable and good faith estimate of your future finances for a total of:

- a. Three years of financial information if you have not completed one tax year, or

Attachment to Part IV Narrative Description of Activities Arroyo Sustainable Economies Community Organization (ASECO)

The following narrative describes the activities of Arroyo Sustainable Economies Community Organization (ASECO). Please note that all activities described below are currently operated as a small project of a much larger organization, the Cooperative Resources & Services Project (CRSP). Once the ASECO corporation obtains tax exemption, all of the projects listed below will become projects of ASECO. Since the activities below are relatively small and require very little funding, the movement of these activities from CRSP to ASECO will not create a successor relationship between the two organizations.

Please also note that ASECO does not have legal members at this time. Thus, any use of the word "member" below refers to members in the informal sense of the word; in other words, the "members" are participants in our activities.

Activity #1: Community Educational Events

Description and Exempt Purpose of Activity:

A primary purpose of Arroyo Sustainable Economies Community Organization (ASECO) is to educate communities about sustainable economies, co-production, and the sharing economy. ASECO's monthly community events include speakers across disciplines relating to our purpose. Speakers have included:

- Diane Carroll, of the Maverick Center, discussing ways to increase interpersonal connections within a community;
- Mud Baron, presenting on the Muir Ranch, a local learning garden and communitysupported agriculture program;
- Dr. Edgar Cahn, founder of Time Banks USA, discussing the origins and applications of time banking;
- Erik Knutzen, of Root Simple, describing his experience as a sustainable urban farmer and homesteader; and
- Michelle Weiner, of Transition Town Culver City, explaining how it is a model for sustainable community development.

In addition, ASECO has hosted classes on a variety of topics aimed at empowering communities with skills to support economic self-reliance. Class topics include:

- Disaster preparedness;
- Conflict resolution for kids;
- Container gardening;
- Time banking and the sharing economy;
- Community gardening;
- Repair Cafes, where participants repair household items and share skills with one another;
- Spanish for beginners;

- Yoga, Tai chi, and Qi Gong
- Diet and Nutrition

In the last two years, ASECO has actively sought to build an engaged learning community by hosting talks and information booths at local events such as the Pasadena Earth and Arts Festival, The Los Angeles Green Festival, The Eco Maya Festival, The Living Economy Salon, The Leadership Academy, Watts Community Festival, California Time Bank Conference, Mindshare, Time Banks USA Conference, Day One Parent Conference, Earthflow Permaculture Class, Southern California Permaculture Convergence, and GOOD Pop Up Community Center.

To demonstrate the range of educational events offered by ASECO, we have attached a copy of the March-August 2013 ASECO calendar of events.

Where, When, and By Whom this Activity is Conducted: All events are taught by volunteers, open to the public, and take place in a variety of accessible locations throughout the Los Angeles area. ASECO's regular community education events began in mid-2011 and have been offered consistently at a rate of between one and six events per month since that time.

How this Activity is Funded: The costs associated with these programs are minimal and supported primarily by individual donations and grants, volunteer time, or in kind donations of venue and food.

Activity #2: Administration of Online Networks to Promote Community Service

Description and Exempt Purpose of Activity:

To further both educational and charitable purpose, ASECO administers an online community network designed to promote volunteerism, community service and mutual aid for community members in need, and training on alternative forms of exchange. This system, known as "time bank," is modeled after the work of numerous similar organizations that have been granted tax exemption by the IRS under 501(c)(3). We refer to this activity as the Arroyo S.E.C.O. Network of Time Banks.

Time banks are primarily a tool for alleviating poverty, economic distress, community deterioration, and neighborhood tensions. In Los Angeles County, as of early 2013, 16.3% of households are below the poverty line (Source: U.S. Census Quick Facts for Los Angeles County), and the unemployment rate is 10.2% (Source: California Employment Development Department). ASECO has created a time bank in response to the high levels of poverty and unemployment in our communities, providing a source of economic stability and support for community members. The time bank also combats community deterioration by motivating community service through increased volunteering at more than 25 local community organizations. In addition, the time bank lessens neighborhood tensions and crime by strengthening social ties in neighborhoods; over 50% of 109 surveyed participants report that they joined the time bank to improve their sense of community, among other reasons.

A time bank is an online community network that builds in a pay-it-forward system of motivation: When one network member provides one hour of assistance to another member, the first member is given a point or "time credit" in the online system, and the second member debits one "time credit" to the other. Each time credit is given or received based on one hour of service, regardless of whether it is a skilled or unskilled service. This creates a heightened sense of empowerment and self worth among participants, whose time might otherwise be unvalued or undervalued. Significantly, members may accrue an unlimited negative balance of "time credits," which means that someone in need of assistance – such as a person with an illness or disability – may get the help they need, without the obligation to earn back the credits they spend. Likewise, someone who provides many hours of service through the time bank does so with the understanding that he or she has no guarantee of having the favor returned.

In the above respects, a time bank is distinguished from a barter network, and could be more accurately described as a community-building tool with a system that motivates and enables community service. The accumulation of points or "time credits" gives members incentives to help those in need, and in turn, people in need receive support that they might otherwise not have been able to afford. Members of the time bank commonly provide services such as childcare, elder care, tutoring, pet care, gardening, food preparation, acupuncture, housecleaning, home maintenance, music lessons, or other personal services. Members may also donate time credits to other members.

In sum, the ASECO time bank alleviates poverty, economic distress, community deterioration, and lessens neighborhood tensions in a five primary ways:

1) Reducing isolation for distressed and disadvantaged community members: The time bank creates a visible and supportive community of people who are unemployed, underemployed, or in need of important services they cannot afford or otherwise access. This reduces isolation for poor, disadvantaged, and distressed members of the community. The social connections and opportunities available in a time bank help to enhance individual's self worth and sense of belonging. Over 75% of ASECO time bank members report building new relationships through their time banking experiences (Source: Arroyo SECO Network of Time Banks Survey 2013).

Reducing isolation and building community connections has also been found to reduce crime. A multi-year study by the Harvard School of Public Health (published in the August 1997 issue of Science) concluded that poverty and joblessness could not account for the differences in crime they found in largely black neighborhoods. The study examined 343 neighborhoods in Chicago and interviewed 8,872 residents, and concluded: By far the largest predictor of the violent crime rate was 'collective efficacy' – a qualitative measurement of community cohesion supported by trust and the role of neighbors in monitoring the neighborhood (Source: The Co-Production Principle and Time Dollars, David Boyle). Similarly, a three-year study by Gallop and Knight Foundation found that communities with the highest levels of community attachment, as measured by factors such as opportunities for social interaction and citizen caring, had the highest rates of economic growth (Source: John S. and James L. Knight Foundation).

- 2) Experiential learning and skill practice: The time bank offers an experiential learning environment in which members can offer and practice a variety of skills and services, and in which members can learn about and practice strategies for meeting needs without money. Learning new skills and building self-reliance increase personal well-being and health, and can also lead to increased economic stability as low-income people learn to meet basic needs in different ways. These skills will be critical for every community member to have during times of economic downturn. 75% of ASECO time bank members report improved general well-being and 30% have seen improved economic stability as a result of their participation in the time bank (Source: Arroyo SECO Network of Time Banks Survey 2013).
- 3) Opportunities for unemployed, underemployed and low-income individuals: According to an online survey of ASECO members, 25% are eligible for government assistance and 57% are not employed full-time for wages (Source: Arroyo SECO Network of Time Banks Survey 2013). The time bank provides a forum where unemployed and underemployed participants can learn about channels for offering and using their skills, becoming productive, and receiving help to meet their needs. The social interactions facilitated by the time bank can also lead to a stronger sense of community and improved personal wellbeing, which is particularly important for people struggling to find work in times of high unemployment.
- 4) Meeting special needs: People with special needs such as the elderly or people with disabilities are able to seek help through the network of assistance offered by volunteers through a time bank. The recent survey of members revealed that 7.34% of ASECO's time bank users report that they live with a partially-debilitating health condition, and 12.04% report that they suffer from chronic health problems. As one ASECO time bank member wrote in the survey, "[I was] recovering from a debilitating injury sustained right when I moved to LA, [time banking] became a way to heal [with acupuncture and massage], improve my professional abilities [illustrator classes] and build my sense of community."

5) Motivating community service: In communities at risk of deterioration, a time bank motivates community service in a variety of forms. In particular, by partnering with a diverse array of community organizations, the ASECO time bank helps organizations to meet their volunteer needs, and creates more opportunities for time bank members to do meaningful work that benefits the community. Time bank members can currently earn time credits for volunteering with the following partnering organizations:

826 LA East Acorn Works Altadena Heritage Armory Center For the Arts ACLA (Art. Community. Land. Activism!) Bresee Foundation Community Center Coalition for Clean Air Cornerstone Theater Cooperative Resources & Services Project Echo Park Film Center Friends Western School Pasadena

> Micheltorena Elementary School Community Garden Pasadena Child Development Associates, Inc. Survivor's Truths

Other exempt purposes served by ASECO time bank depend partially on the nature of the particular services members provide and receive through the Time Bank. For example:

- Promotion of Health: The time bank creates a forum through which any member may seek and receive free health care or participate in preventative activities. In this respect, the time bank promotes health for the community. Time bank participants have received blood tests, well-woman exams and post partum doula services, as well as organized support groups, nutrition advice, and an exercise group for preventative health.
- Combating Juvenile Delinquency: The time bank also creates a forum in which youth may volunteer their time and receive needed services, such as conflict mediation training, which empowers youth to resolve conflicts in positive ways. This training combats juvenile delinquency by providing youth with a positive skill, sense of belonging, and opportunity for meaningful participation in the community.

Membership in the time bank is open to all. Community members may join the ASECO time bank by filling out a brief online application form and attending an orientation. No one has been denied membership to date. A group of current members reviews applications and invites applicants to an orientation. The purpose of orientation is to help new members get acquainted with our mission, core values, and software. Because we have a web-based interface, members without computer access are paired with a partner who can be their liaison; we recognize that community members have varying levels of computer skills and we aim to foster a welcoming culture of inclusivity and tolerance.

The primary roles of ASECO in operating the time bank include:

- 1. Maintaining and updating the website, social media, event information, software upgrades, and overall online public communications.
- 2. Conducting outreach by attending community events and providing community members with information about the time bank. Our educational activities, described in Activity #1, dovetail with our time bank in many important ways. The efficacy of the time bank relies heavily on community members' understanding of the purpose and spirit of a time bank and of the value of community building.
- 3. Orienting new members every month.
- 4. Helping people make connections with one another and connecting untapped resources with unmet needs. We have a team of "matchmakers," members who are available to introduce people to each other in case they cannot find what they need.
- 5. Hosting many projects and events such as potlucks and gardening days to build community trust and encourage mutual support.
- 6. Providing community members an incentive to be active in community service by offering discount public transportation (metro) passes. To qualify for the discount metro pass, members are required to conduct 12 exchanges per year. This encourages participation and builds local resiliency. Members pay a year up front to ASECO and ASECO pays Metro. ASECO does not charge for this service. This project is unfunded and managed by time bank members.

Where, When, and By Whom this Activity is Conducted: Volunteer time bank members manage these services on a consistent basis. With adequate funding, ASECO may hire staff to manage some of the administrative tasks involved with the time bank. Activities are conducted at local community centers, libraries, private homes, churches, or other donated facilities.

How this Activity is Funded: Members donate their time to help manage these services and are given time credits for their assistance. We provide these services without charge. ASECO requests donations but no one is turned away for lack of funds. ASECO will be seeking grants to sustain the administration of the time bank as it grows.

Activity #3: Providing Education and Technical Support to Other Time Banks

Description and Exempt Purpose of Activity:

ASECO coordinates and convenes an informal network known as the California Federation of Time Banks, the primary purpose of which is educational. In this role, ASECO assists in organizing conferences, regional trainings, and conference calls aimed providing learning opportunities for time bank organizers in California. ASECO also provides technical assistance on how to start a time bank, best practices, and general information about time banking.

Where, When, and By Whom this Activity is Conducted: ASECO members and community volunteers provide these services.

How this Activity is Funded: Members donate their time to help manage these services and are given time credits for their assistance. We provide these services without charge. ASECO requests donations but no one is turned away for lack of funds. ASECO may seek grants to support future events and conferences for the California Federation of Time Banks.

Activity #4:

Community Revolving Loan Fund for New Enterprises in Communities of Economic Distress

Description and Exempt Purpose of Activity: Launching in January of 2014, the Arroyo SECO Community Revolving Loan Fund (CRLF) is a charitable project seeking to educate, support, and empower our local community through micro-loans and access to professional development. The CRLF supports community revitalization by offering local community members – many of whom are artisans, entrepreneurs and members of worker-owned cooperatives – access to community-supported, low interest micro-loans to build their small businesses.

The CRLF is aimed at the relief of community deterioration and the relief of the poor and distressed and underprivileged. Most small business owners, especially those in high density urban areas of economic distress, cannot qualify for loans from major banking institutions because their businesses do not meet the lending requirements or priorities for big banks (typically $100,000 or more), because of the financial risks involved in establishing and operating enterprises in an economically distressed area, or because of their membership in minority or other disadvantaged groups. But studies have shown that locally owned businesses in any community have a greater positive impact on the local economy than national chains and large corporations, because they create more jobs for locals, encourage residents to buy more locally, ease community tension and distress from limited access to goods and services, and they give more to local charities.

Eligible community members with either a small business or worker-owned cooperative may apply to receive a micro-loan of between $500 and $5000.

In order to be eligible to receive a loan, an applicant must demonstrate that he/she is any of the following:

- 1. Starting or operating a business that is likely to contribute importantly to the revitalization of a neighborhood of demonstrated economic distress;
- 2. Starting or operating a business aimed at creating employment opportunities in a neighborhood of demonstrated economic distress;
- 3. A low income individual (measured at twice the poverty level), without access to conventional commercial financing; or
- 4. A member of a disadvantaged class of individuals without access to conventional commercial financing.

To be eligible to receive a loan, a community member must also demonstrate that he or she has performed the following:

- 5. Attended the required, no-cost educational workshops through the Local Economy Incubator (described below) to obtain and/or enhance business and employment development skills and knowledge; and
- 6. Completed the CRLF Application describing the business/cooperative in need of funds, statement of need, anticipated impact of the loan on the borrower, a business plan (if available), financials that demonstrate cash flow and repayment strategy, the impact of business on the community, and demonstrated commitment to improve the community it serves.

A volunteer committee of time bank members with no financial interest in the loans will review applications, choose loan recipients, and identify areas for professional development and education. Additional priority will be given to women business owners and the economically distressed, ventures that promote environmental and/or community sustainability, ventures that show direct and positive impact on the community, and social entrepreneurs or cooperatives with a social mission.

Funds to the borrower will be disbursed and administered by the Permaculture Credit Union (PCU), which will levy a 6% interest rate on the loan - a rate below most standard small business loan market rates. The 6% interest is designed primarily to pay for the PCU's costs in administering the loan. ASECO will not impose an interest rate of any kind for its own benefit or purposes. Borrowers must become members of the PCU, with an account holding a minimum of $50 and a $5 processing fee. CRLF funds will be partitioned and released by PCU as loans are made and repaid. Loans will be exclusively managed by a volunteer loan manager who will provide monthly support and assistance to borrowers to ensure repayment. Loans will be deemed in default by PCU after 90 days without payment. Should a borrower default completely on a loan, the PCU will permanently withdraw the funds in question from partitioned CRLF funds. By partnering with an established and federally regulated financial institution, we offer our members an opportunity to enhance their existing credit rating, making them even more viable in the mainstream economic system by offering them access to resources that would otherwise be unobtainable.

As a requirement of receiving a loan, borrowers will also participate in the Local Economy Incubator, described below, which matches entrepreneurs with mentors who provide business development education in areas such as sustainability, strategy, business plan development, branding, media, and more. They will also be required to serve on at least one future loan review panel to provide peer support and to ensure each panel contains the valuable perspective of a former borrower.

Where, When, and By Whom this Activity is Conducted: ASECO volunteers will donate their time to help manage these services and will be given time credits in the time bank for their assistance. When funds become available ASECO may hire staff to assist in the administration of this program. This program will begin in January of 2014 and will focus on the Los Angeles area.

How this Activity is Funded: This activity will be funded by many small individual donations and a $5000 grant received by our current sponsor, CRSP, for this purpose. ASECO may seek other grants in the future in order to grow the pool of funds available for lending.

Percentage of Total Organization Time Devoted to this Activity: 15%

Activity #5: Mentorship and Education for Entrepreneurs

Description and Exempt Purpose of Activity:

The ASECO Local Economy Incubator (LEI) provides technical assistance to community members who are developing a small business or cooperative. The primary purpose of LEI is educational. ASECO pairs these community members with local entrepreneurs who agree to be mentors and provide guidance on sustainability, business plans, branding, strategy, budgeting, and other support reasonably within the scope of a mentorship relationship. The LEI exists to support and empower emerging businesses and co-ops as a way to revitalize the local economy and make the community more self-reliant. The LEI educates and supports businesses that prioritize the wellbeing of community members and the planet, as well as provide a needed good or service for the region.

We offer professional development to two entrepreneurs or co-ops annually. Candidates are selected from a pool of applicants by a committee of time bank members and mentors. The list of criteria used in selecting participants includes that the participant must be a time bank member, conduct business in the local area, and source materials and supplies from within the region as much as possible.

Where, When, and By Whom this Activity is Conducted: ASECO volunteers donate their time to help manage these services and are given time credits for their assistance. This program is offered throughout the year in the Los Angeles area.

How this Activity is Funded: We provide these services without charge, and, as a result, very little funding is needed. ASECO requests donations but no one is turned away for lack of funds.

Percentage of Total Organization Time Devoted to this Activity: 10%

Attachment to Part VI, Questions 1(a) and 1(b):

The following is a combined answer to Part VI, Questions 1 (a) and 1(b):

In carrying out our exempt purposes, ASECO provides a service to community members, which is to administer and ensure the smooth operation of an online network and point-tracking system for a time bank. The answer is the same for both Question 1(a) and Question 1(b), because individuals, businesses, and nonprofit organizations are eligible to join the time bank. We do not charge a fee to join the time bank, but we do lightly suggest that new members make a donation to our organization.

Attachment to Part VIII, Question 4a

Description of fundraising activities:

- Donations will be solicited via email from our community in an annual campaign to support the ongoing administrative infrastructure needed to facilitate service.
- Personal solicitations will be made periodically when a potential individual donor or funder is identified in the community.
- We will accept any vehicle, boat, or other equipment donation should it serve the purposes of the organization, i.e. if someone donates a truck to serve as a truck for the organization.
- Grant solicitations will be made to fund operating expenses. Grants will be solicited from both local and national foundations.
- Donations will be accepted via the website as a convenient way for the community to donate when possible.
- Government grant solicitations may be made in the future to fund some of our community initiatives.

Attachment to Part VIII, Questions 6a and 6b

Our only economic development activity is our Community Revolving Loan Fund (CRLF), which is described, in full, as "Activity #4" in Attachment to Part IV, "Narrative Description of Activities." That Attachment describes who benefits from our economic development activities and how the activities promote exempt purposes.

Attachment to Part VIII, Question 10

ASECO may create, print, and electronically publish many materials to educate communities on sustainable economies and time banking. The intellectual property will be owned by ASECO and the materials will usually be provided to the public for free. We may occasionally charge a fee for publications, particularly to cover the cost of printing, or if we invest a substantial amount of time or other resources in creating the publications. The primary purpose of all publications is educational and fees will be designed to cover the costs of creating the publications.

Attachment to Part VIII, Question 11

ASECO has no current plans or opportunities to accept donations of real property or valuable assets. However, we would like to remain open to this possibility, in the event that such property or assets are offered to us. We will generally only accept the donation of such property or assets if title is given to us free and clear of encumbrance or other conditions.

Attachment to Part VIII, Question 13

ASECO makes loans to organizations and enterprises through our Community Revolving Loan Fund (CRLF), which is described, in full, as "Activity #4" in Attachment to Part IV, "Narrative Description of Activities." That Attachment describes who benefits from the loans and how the activities promote exempt purposes.

The CRLF will begin in January of 2014, and we have therefore not yet developed all of the application forms and agreements that we will use in connection with the CRLF. We have not yet identified any recipients of the loans.
